Women Enumerators Are a Success, Says Supervisor Murray.

"The women enumerators are equally as good as the men, and in some cases they have accomplished much better work."

These were the words of Mr. Murray, the affable Supervisor of the Census, to an Evening Would reporter as he sat at his deak this morning, almost hidden behind a huge bundle of letters.

Evening Would reporter as he sat at his desk this morning, almost hidden behind a huse bundle of letters.

"We have at least twenty-five female enumerators," he continued, "actively engaged in gathering census statistics, and I must say that they are doing mighty well. They appear to get along more smoothly in their work, and meet with few or no obstacles in getting answers to all the questions in the schedule, even including the alleged objectionable ones.

"Took forward to great results from the ladies co-operation in the work, and my expectations are based onlie reasonably on the reports so far at hand.

The ladies have evidently made a hit in census gathering. They have been particularly successful in interviewing the "awful man whom the inquisitive young male interrogator has often found to be unapproachable.

Rumor has it that a score or more of susceptible gentlemen have been smitten by the charms of the fair enumerators, and certain it is that one young lady in the upper end of Harlem has successed in capturing the heart of an old bachelor by only one visit to his household.

It is not to be wondered at either. All the lady enumerators are pretty in face and figure, and very attractive in manner. Much credit should redound to Mr. Murray for his particularly happy selections.

The presence of the lady enumerator has had a molififying effect on the atmosphere of the Census Office. He was the first enumerator to finish his district.

Clark's good work was duly appreciated, and Mr. Murray rewarded him by giving him another district, which had been partially covered by a young man who found the heat too much for him and he resigned.

Other enumerators who, like Mr. Clark, have done rapid work, will be likewise rewarded, for Mr. Murray has decided to hold out continuous employment as an incentive to the men who so distinguish themselves.

Judge Bedford says he will take no further notice whatever of the insinuations of the Georgia Colonel regarding his conduct of the LampoLasso murder trial. He has left the matter entirely in the hands of Col. Fellows, and will abide by his decision.
Col. Dawson, though, has been perambulating the District-Attorney's office all the morning with a ship on his arcuider. He denies sunphatically that he has invited Judge Bedford to fight and avers that Judge Bedford to fight and avers that Judge Bedford should, by the code, be the challenging party. or by ex-Judge Gunning S.
